

A black and white photograph of a large industrial foundry. In the center, a worker is pouring molten metal from a ladle into a mold, with a large plume of white steam or smoke rising from the point of contact. To the left, another worker stands near a large pile of dark material, possibly sand. On the right, two more workers are visible, one of whom is also handling a ladle. The background is dominated by a large, multi-paned window that allows natural light into the dark interior of the factory. The floor is cluttered with various pieces of industrial equipment, including buckets and molds.
